There is a silver lining or an opportunity in the impacts COVID-19 has/is having on higher education at multiple levels, which include but are not limited to the future of contact teaching and learning, what and how we do research and international collaborations and partnerships including staff and student mobility. The silver lining or opportunity is to rethink/re-imagine higher education in what is an age of disruptions that we have faced as a sector and as humanity and the world. COVID 19 is a health crisis that has exacerbated existing crises of politics, the economy, the environment and society more broadly. More specifically we should identify innovative ways and means of re-aligning higher education with societal challenges in ways that engender the creation of a new more sustainable world that is characterised by equity and equality, social justice and a more ethical use of natural resources.
